Pattern for Progress President Jonathan Drapkin this month announced plans for the 50th anniversary of Pattern, a celebration which will take place now through 2015. At Pattern’s annual meeting and awards reception on Nov. 6, Drapkin announced "Pattern for the Future," a campaign to raise $1,000,000. The funds will support a research agenda on three fronts — revitalization of the Hudson Valley's urban areas, innovations in the public education system and Pattern's ongoing regional solutions agenda which includes work in infrastructure, housing and community development.

John Rath, a former Pattern board chairman has been named chairman of the Pattern for the Future campaign; development consultant April Gozza will lead the campaign outreach effort.

Pattern has already met a substantial portion of its million-dollar goal through a $400,000 Ford Foundation grant given to Pattern through the Regional Plan Association (RPA). The grant will provide partial support to Pattern’s work on a project called the Hudson Valley Urban Action Agenda. In the long-term project, Pattern will build on existing efforts and seek new ways to attract and retain young people to urban areas throughout the region.

Pattern for Progress was founded in 1965 to seek balanced and sustainable solutions to enhance the growth and vitality of the Hudson Valley. Rath said the 50th Anniversary of Pattern provides a time to reflect on the work that’s been done and the work that lies ahead. "Pattern exists to help preserve the beauty, vitality and quality of life we all enjoy in the Hudson Valley by providing an independent voice on tough issues many can’t or won’t undertake," he said. "I am honored to chair the anniversary campaign as we continue to fulfill this mission." Stay tuned for more news about the anniversary year.
